For a better representation of the revenues of our brokerage business, we recasted the margins related to the management of liquidity related to clients' stock lending activity from banking to brokerage. As a consequence, interest expenses related to stock lending activity have been recasted from "Other" line into "Financial Investments", while margins related to the management of the liquidity we get from clients are now attributed to the Brokerage business. Gross margins slightly changed accordingly. See on slide 32 for details related to the breakdown by product area.
